Limb Trauma Educational Series

Monthly Topic: The Utility of Focusing on Functioning Part 2

Live Session: October 22, 2025, at 12:00 PM ET

Within the healthcare field, "functioning" is generally understood as a person's ability to perform activities and interact with his or her environment. Depending on the setting and population treated, as well as the training/field of the provider, how "functioning" is operationalized varies widely. Literature suggests that there are interventions to target functioning that may serve as "multi-tools" for a population of service members with limb trauma. In this session, we will discuss the functioning interventions that are effective across mental health concerns and apply them to case studies that focus on individuals with physical trauma.
